Warning as ambulance figures reveal town's growing booze culture

Drunken behaviour in Kingston has given it the capital's largest increase in alcohol-related 999 calls since drink licensing laws were relaxed.

This is the London Ambulance Service's busiest week, and as the New Year's Eve revels approach, it has revealed that alcohol-related emergency calls in Kingston have gone up by 35 per cent to 821 in the 10 months to September.

Many of them were not genuine emergencies but drinkers who had fallen over or could not get home.

Paul Jacobs, the co-ordinator for the Street Pastors, whose volunteers help people in trouble on the streets late at night, said: "Often drunk people who have been separated from their friends have no way of getting home and will phone an ambulance."

"We help them get a bus or a taxi or call someone to pick them up."

Graham Norton, ambulance operators manager, said people need to be more sensible about how much they drink and take responsibility for themselves and their friends.

He said: "We can't blame pubs and clubs because they do their jobs very well. Individuals should take some sort of ownership for their actions."

"A lot of the calls we receive do not require an ambulance. It can be frustrating for our crews because these kind of call-outs stop vehicles going to people in life-threatening situations.

"We encourage people to call NHS Direct or NHS walk in services rather than call an ambulance unless necessary."

The taxi-marshall scheme in central Kingston already ensures that it is much easier for people to get home from the town centre late at night.

The Best Bar None initiative also promotes best practice among among licensees.

Steve Fleury, manager of Kingston's Oceana nightclub, said it was already doing all it could to take the pressure off the ambulance service by not letting in or serving obviously drunk people.

He said: "We have changed as an industry over the last 10 years and we no longer have an 'out the door, not our problem any more' policy."

The club employs a trained paramedic on site who deals with clubbers who have drunk too much. Mr Fleury said it has made fewer 999 calls as clubbers with minor problems get helped there and then.

For those who are planning a big night out on New Year's Eve, Mr Norton advises eating before you go out, planning your journey home before you leave - and, of course, drinking less.

'Not another cheap hotel!'

by MATT WATTS

mwatts@london.newsquest.co.uk

Plans to turn a Kingston office block into the borough's third Travelodge hotel will not help the town centre shake off its more downmarket image, according to the Kingston Society.

BA Partnership, which owns the International House building in Wheatfield Way, has just submitted a planning application along with the hotel chain to convert floors six to 11 of the building into a 102-bedroom budget hotel.

But Kingston Society Chairman Jennifer Butterworth said she did not think there would be much enthusiasm for another cheap hotel in the area, especially when plans for a high-end hotel on the old power station site in Skerne Road had been turned down.

She said: "We need developments that are going to bring up the character of the area, and a budget hotel in a not very attractive building does not do that."

"We are interested in a four star hotel like Skerne Road and the Rose Theatre, which are going to move Kingston town centre away from its terrible drug and alcohol culture."

Yet Town Centre Manager Graham McNally said he supported the plans for another hotel.

"A lot of effort has been made to find a business tenant for the building and this has not been possible, so converting it into a hotel is a good use of the space," he said.

He believes plans for the Skerne Road hotel will go ahead, and that this would not conflict with the Travelodge.

"We have a large business economy as well as a large student population," he said.

"We need to develop our hotel accommodation by catering for different markets."

A spokesperson for Travelodge said the existing Travelodges in Kingston are experiencing overwhelming demand, proving there is a need for additional budget hotel accommodation in the area.

She said the hotel would bring 30 new jobs and boost

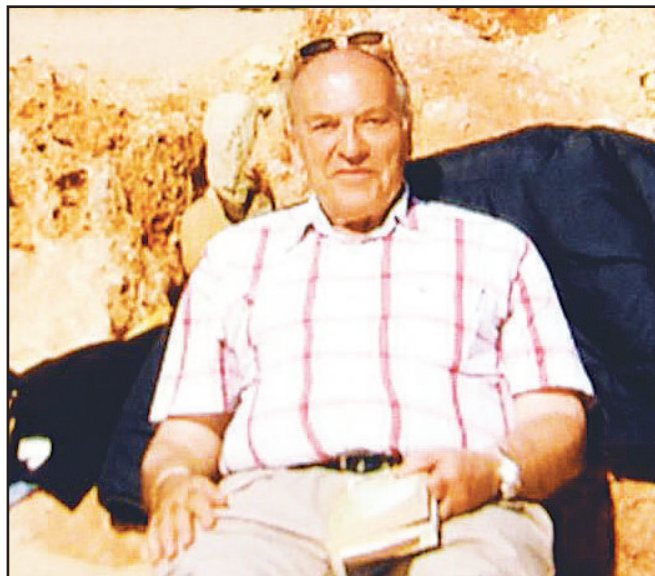

'No thank you': The proposed site for the Travelodge employment in the area.

She added that local businesses will also benefit from the additional tourism.

Fresh appeal after hit-and-run

Killed in a hit-and-run: Mike Cowley

Police have launched a fresh appeal for witnesses after a fatal hit-and-run in Chessington.

Mike Cowley, 73, of Woodgate Avenue, Chessington, was hit by an articulated lorry in Hook Road, at 4.20pm on Wednesday, December 12.

Mr Cowley, a school governor at Castle Hill Primary School, was on the way to buy stamps for his Christmas cards when he was hit.

He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Police located the lorry and driver on December 17.

No arrests have been made, but anyone who witnessed the accident is urged to contact the collision investigation unit on 020 8941 9011 with information.

Caught on the tracks

A 60-year-old woman was left with serious injuries after being trapped under a train at Worcester Park station last Wednesday.

The driver of the 16.39 London Waterloo to Guildford train reported seeing a woman on the line as he pulled into Worcester Park station at 30 mph, at about 5pm.

He blew the horn and pulled the emergency brake but could not stop in time.

The woman, who is from Worcester Park, was hit by the train and became trapped underneath.

All trains on the line were immediately stopped and emergency services were called to help free the woman.

After nearly an hour, she was taken to Kingston Hospital where she was in a serious but stable condition.

South West trains services were severely disrupted between London Waterloo and Chessington.

Trains to Chessington South were also suspended as a knock-on effect, and services diverted to Hampton Court.

The incident comes only months after a teenage girl was dragged under a train on the opposite platform at Worcester Park station, leaving her seriously ill in hospital.

Last week, the line through Worcester Park train station was closed following a major landslide.

Anyone who saw the incident last Wednesday should contact the British Transport Police on 0800 405040.

'Don't let ads clog up the pavement'

Kingston Council's campaign to liberate pavements from advertising boards will forge ahead in the new year.

From Monday, January 14, council officers will conduct regular sweeps to identify businesses using the free-standing A boards.

Letters will be sent to the business asking for the boards to be removed within four weeks and follow up inspections will remove and dispose of any remaining offenders.

Councillor Simon James, executive member for transport, planning and regeneration at the council, said: "It will reduce street clutter, provide a safer environment for all pedestrians and secure equality of access, particularly for those with disabilities."

Traders in Old London Road had mixed reactions to the proposals. John Cobbold from Kingston Antiques Centre said: "We were against it at first, but we have got planning permission to fix permanent signs to the railings."

"It cost £85 per trader. With a permanent fixture I won't have to take in out in the mornings and in at night."

Yvan Bamping, from Active Microsystems internet cafe, said: "It will affect my business because people walking past might glance down the street but they won't be able to any signs. It's advertising we are losing so that affects us."

A council working group was set up last January to look at alternative shop advertising and its findings will be reported to the executive next month.

Coun James said: "The council supports businesses' rights to promote their products, but they must not obstruct the pavement."

Mother's anguish at killing

by CARA LEE

clee@london.newsquest.co.uk

The wall of silence surrounding the shooting of James Smartt-Ford shows little sign of breaking after only half a dozen calls were made in response to an emotional Crime-watch appeal by his mother Tracey.

Police said that last week's appeal into the New Malden teenager's death at Streatham Ice Rink on February 3 had drawn a "positive response", but Detective Superintendent Gary Richardson told the Kingston Guardian on Friday last week that in fact only half a dozen calls had been received immediately after the broadcast, and some of these were useless.

"Nothing required any action overnight," he said, and added that some callers had named suspects already known to police.

Police believe that up to 20 youths have heard the killers "bragging or boasting" about the murder of 17-year-old James, who was known to friends as Andre.

D Supt Richardson said that their loyalties may have changed since his death and hoped they will have become mature enough to report it to police.

James, a former Coombe Boys' School pupil, who had just enrolled in an electrical installation course, was shot at a disco night attended by more than 300 people.

His mum, Tracey Ford, 45, told of her family's anguish over the killing and appealed to Crimewatch viewers to come forward with information about his killers.

"Words can't describe how I miss him, there are no words to describe

TV appeal: Reconstruction of James Smartt-Ford's killing and, inset, his mother Tracey on Crimewatch that," she said. "You don't expect to bury your children. You don't give them life for it to be so tragically ended.

"The boys responsible for Andre's murder, I don't know how they live, knowing what they've done, knowing that they've taken away our son.

They've destroyed a family."

The BBC1 programme featured a reconstruction and live interview with D Supt Richardson.

Two shots were fired at James, who managed to stagger a few metres onto the ice before collapsing.

Since the incident, nine people, including seven youths, were arrested and bailed. No one has been charged and no weapon has been recovered.

If you can help find the killers, phone 020 8247 4554 or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Man arrested with machete

A 25-year-old from Surbiton may face jail after he was caught with a machete in a pub car park.

Nathan Sobithy, of Hook Road, was seen by police with the weapon after he left St Mark's Bar in St Mark's Hill, following an argument between him and his girlfriend, which saw her ejected from the bar.

Sobithy, who bought the machete in the same road that day, had stashed it in a bush while he drank with friends in the bar.

He dropped the machete and ran when the police approached but he was caught and arrested.

Sobithy pleaded guilty to having the machete without good reason or lawful authority, but denied it was un-sheathed.

He will return to the court on January 15, for sentencing. Chief magistrate Mrs Reardon said the court would consider all punishments, including a custodial sentence.

Driver is fined

A Polish mechanic caught driving his Audi in Fairfield South in Kingston, without insurance or a valid MOT, was fined £250 by Kingston magistrates last Thursday.

Wojtek Moskal was stopped by Police at 11am on December 3, after they noticed he was driving without a seatbelt. He pleaded guilty to the offence.

Armed gang get 54 years

by HOLLYE BLADES

hblades@london.newsquest.co.uk

Seven armed robbers who targeted bureaux de changes at travel agents, including Thomson's in New Malden and Worcester Park, have been jailed for a combined 54 years.

They were part of a gang of 14 people from across Sussex and south London who targeted a range of commercial premises but focussed mainly on travel agents with bureau de change facilities.

Kingston Crown Court heard last Tuesday how over nearly two years they targeted 32 different shops, often armed with stun guns to persuade reluctant employees to hand over cash.

The robberies began on January 21, 2006 with an attack on a travel agent in Stockwell, where the gang stole a large amount of cash and foreign currency.

In February 2006, the Thomson's travel agents in Central Road, Worcester Park, was robbed for the first time, with the gang coming back again in May the same year.

There were also two attempted robberies at Going Places in Epsom Road, Sutton, in March and April 2006, along with Thomson's in New Malden High Street in May 2006 and its Epsom High Street branch on August 14, 2006.

The gang members were arrested in June 2006 and October 2006, after surveillance operations by the Metropolitan police's flying squad.

Many of the defendants were already known to the police, having only been recently released from prison sentences for similar offences in the late 1990s and in 2000.

Detective Constable Dan Williams from the flying squad said: "This was a persistent and organised group of armed robbers who carefully planned and targeted their crimes. I am pleased the courts have recognised the seriousness of these crimes."

NHS awards man for giving blood 78 times

A 69-year-old blood donor from Worcester Park has received an award from the NHS for giving blood on 78 different occasions.

John Dadds, of Broadmead Avenue, who has been giving blood on average twice a year since he was 21, was given the award at the National Blood Centre awards dinner held in London.

Mr Dadds, who is a volunteer with 1st Malden Scouts, said: "I first gave blood as part of my national service - when you had to have a very good reason not to give blood - but I thought it was a great idea, so I have just kept on doing it."

Mr Dadds was given his award by a blood cancer sufferer who regularly receives blood transfusions.

"She thanked me for being one of the people who has helped save her life," said Mr Dadds. "That's what makes it all feel it has been worth it."

Beat shopping blues

Shopping in the sales can be stressful at the best of times but rude and unhelpful staff can make it intolerable.

That is why a Kingston man has set up a website to help disgruntled shoppers take their revenge on shoddy service or apathetic staff by sharing their bad experiences.

Nick Booth, a freelance writer, who lives in Woodbines Avenue, started his website as a fun way to put pressure on shops to provide better customer service.

He said: "People say that the UK's primary industry is services

by REBECCA EVANS

newsdesk@kingstonguardian.co.uk

but we're actually not terribly good at it.

"I thought it would be therapeutic for people to rant down the phone, and their complaint will go on the website."

The website uses voice recognition technology that turns a call into text and gets put online.

Mr Booth stressed that he wants people to reward good service as well as bad, and some retailers have welcomed the idea.

Karen Lindsay, who works in senior sales at The Pier in the Bentall Centre, said: "I think it's a good idea. We train all our staff in customer service, and it is key in our store."

"We're probably the friendliest store in Kingston and we would hate it if people had a bad experience shopping at the Pier."

Philosopher to bring cohesion

A discussion led by Julian Baggini, editor of The Philosophers' Magazine, will open a two-week festival at Market House in Kingston next spring.

Mr Baggini will speak about his latest book, Welcome to Everytown – A Journey into the English Mind – as part of the festival which aims to bring the community together in Kingston.

Organiser Marilyn Mason said: "It all started with a bit of grumble about the lack of community space and things to do for those past their 20s in central Kingston. Kingston is lovely during the day but most people over 25 don't find it particularly appealing at night."

She came up with the idea after two Coffee House Challenge discussions in the town revealed a desire to see the under-used space brought to life in the evenings.

To get involved in the festival, contact Marilyn via the festival website at markethousefestival.org.uk

The new year hike in bus and Tube fares met with a barrage of criticism from Kingston travellers, MP Edward Davey and London Assembly members.

Transport for London raised the cost of most cash tickets on January 2, widening the gap in price between one-off tickets and journeys on pre-pay Oyster cards.

Kingston and Surbiton MP Edward Davey said: "I am appalled this Labour Government continues in its efforts to make train travel a luxury that few people can afford."

Kingston was transformed into a winter wonderland when some rare London snow fell.

Kassia Unwin, 22 months, was out to make a snowman in the park with her parents Matthew and Carol.

The fatal shooting of ex-Coombe Boys' School pupil James Smartt-Ford plunged a whole community into mourning.

Staff said James, 16, of New Malden, was popular with everyone and particularly loved to play football.

He was shot dead at the ice rink in Streatham High Road on Saturday, February 3.

Pupils said it was hard to imagine what could have led him to such a tragic end.

For £15, guests could go behind the scenes to meet one of the sea lions and a keeper.

Campaigners declared a victory for the community after a dramatic u-turn saved Kingston's Tudor Drive library. More than 200 people staged a demonstration outside the library on Friday and Susan Kramer MP, whose Richmond Park constituency includes the library, met fellow Liberal Democrat Derek Osbourne, leader of Kingston Council, on the same day to make her opposition to the closure clear.

Mr Osbourne said: "We've listened to the public concerns."

Too low: Emergency services clear up after the German lorry struck the railway bridge
Deadlinepix KT12844

MARCH

A German lorry became the latest vehicle to crash into the railway bridge in Norbiton. Driver Alexy Fischer said he was following directions from his sat-nav and did not see the the height restriction sign until it was too late. Despite the frequent accidents, Railtrack announced later in the year it would not raise the clearance on the bridge when it is replaced in August 2008.

Synchronised drumming from the South Korean troupe Dulsori helped Coombe Girls' School celebrate Korean New Year. The troupe performed Binarri – which means appealing the anxious heart to a supernatural being, a traditional piece using rhythms to create sounds of the natural world.

A tour through the history of ladies' underwear as part of the Spring Charity Ladies' Luncheon helped raise up to £5,000 for the Kingston Can Appeal. The Knicker Lady, historian and performer Rosemary Hawthorne, performed her one-woman show at the event, which was a sell-out.

APRIL

A Chessington boy with brittle bone disease who overcame a double fracture on his leg to compete in Sunday's London Marathon has filled his family with pride after winning his age group race. Jack Binstead, 10, broke his right leg in two places on Tuesday last week, and was told he could not race for four to six weeks. But five days after the accident, he was back in his racing wheelchair to compete in the London Mini Marathon, winning the race for his age group and raising £800 for his Kingston-based racing club Velocity.

In December, Jack's heroism was recognised by Prime Minister Gordon Brown when he was part of a group to visit to Downing Street.

Guantanamo Bay prisoner Bisher al-Rawi from New Malden celebrated his freedom by appealing for other British residents to be released from the Cuban airbase. After being held by the Americans for four years, the Iraqi citizen flew back on Sunday, April 1, to London, where he has lived with his family since he was 16. His lawyer Zachary Katznelson said that Mr al-Rawi was was shackled, blindfolded and earmuffed even on the way to the airport to be released. Mr al-Rawi was arrested by the CIA in November 2002 as he arrived in the Gambia to help his brother Wahab and Mr el-Banna set up a peanut factory. A teenager from a good home blamed a death in the family for turning him into a crack dealer aged 17. He was arrested in October after neighbours complained to the Surbiton safer neighbourhood team that he was dealing drugs from a flat in Victoria Road. He will serve at least half the of the custodial 18-month detention and training order in a young offenders' institute for possessing hundreds of pounds-worth of crack cocaine and heroin.

MAY

Four-year-old Hajun Cho was at New Malden fire station on Monday to help firefighters brush up on their Korean. It is hoped the six-week language course will help firefighters to spread the fire safety message in the Korean community. Maura Haughey is from the generation that once hoped they'd die before they got old. But now the former social worker is one of 40 wrinkly rockers to have recorded the Who's mod classic My Generation, as part of new supergroup the Zimmers. The Irish-born grandmother, 65, of St James Close, New Malden, is a backing singer with the group, which, with a combined age of 3,000 years, has recorded the song at the world-famous Abbey Road studios. "Ten years is not enough" – was the view of one of the prostitutes attacked by Daniel Fuller, the gangster jailed for masterminding a robbery and blackmail plot on brothels in Surbiton and beyond. Fuller, 25, was jailed for 10 years at Kingston Crown Court for his part in dozens of violent robberies on sex workers between June and December 2005. But Fuller could be free within three years with parole and time spent on remand.

JUNE

The shisha smokers of Surbiton were among the casualties when the smoking ban came into effect. The shisha – a large middle-eastern pipe used to smoke tobacco soaked in fruit shavings – is a centuries-old tradition. Shehzad Adwan, who managed the Smokey Bubbles cafe in Surbiton Road said the smoking ban meant he would have to shut down the shisha operation.

Kingston resident Michael Enright was furious to receive a bill for damages after a drunk driver mowed him down, killed his dog and broke a fence outside Tiffin School.

with horrific leg injuries, after the collision in the small hours of October 14.

A Nissan Skyline driven by Alexander Shirinyants, 19, of Charter Quay, Kingston, mounted the pavement, smashing into a wall, killing Michael's dog Deefa.

Shirinyants had his licence revoked for drink-driving but, because of a police error, the council was told Mr Enright was the driver. The council wrote asking him to pay for the accident damage and the cost of disposing of his dog Deefa's body. A police spokesman admitted a "clerical error".

Peter Millard was walking back from a friend's birthday party, having recently retired at a youthful 52.

Timber yard worker Darren Coomber was enjoying a night out driving with his brother.

Both had their lives abruptly cut short in a week of three horrific car crashes.

Mr Coomber died in New Malden when the car his brother Dean was driving smashed into the Fountain roundabout.

The second fatality happened on Saturday night at about 11.50pm when Peter Millard was walking home from a friend's birthday and was hit at the junction of Old Kingston Road and Jubilee Road.

Mopping up: Unseasonal flooding brought chaos to the town centre

Deadlinepix KT15496

JULY

For anyone trying to get in or out of Kingston, it was a day to forget as Friday floods brought chaos to the streets.

Town centre manager Graham McNally said the capital went into "meltdown", with the town's one-way system shut, train delays and cancellations and almost all bus services diverted.

He said: "The water levels were extraordinary. There were at least three locations in Kingston where access and exit to and from the town was blocked. London was in meltdown so put in perspective, I think Kingston was relatively lucky."

In Elm Road, Kingston the first floor of the Sobraon nursing home was flooded, the Wych Elm's award winning garden was wrecked and cars floated away on the waves.

Tents and showers were erected in the street to help the emergency services rehearse how they would respond to a dangerous substance being found at Kingston University. The scenario, which had been planned for four months, was based on a fictitious robbery at the university during a global warming conference.

On arrival, police discovered a potentially dangerous substance on location and had to decontaminate 31 people.

Metropolitan Police Commissioner Sir Ian Blair has backed our Stop Knife Crime campaign, a week after Kingston stab victim Mikey Brown's girlfriend gave birth to their son, Romarni.

After the death of Mr Brown, 23, at the Works nightclub in Kingston, and numerous other knife-crime incidents in surrounding boroughs, this paper launched a campaign to stop knife crime.

Speaking after a Kingston Racial Equality Council annual general meeting in New Malden, Sir Ian said the campaign was "exactly right".

He said: "To have 15 teenagers murdered in London in six months is fundamentally unacceptable."

AUGUST

A policewoman who lost her phone on a night out drinking lied, saying it was stolen so she could claim on her insurance.

Davinder Gill, 30, had been out at O'Neills bar in Wardour Street, Soho, on April 7 last year when it is claimed she left on her own and caught a taxi to her then home in Surbiton, leaving her handbag in the bar.

She was found out when the phone turned up in lost property.

She resigned from the force before returning to court again when she admitted falsely claiming her father was driving her car when she was caught speeding.

More than 200 people joined a vigil for murdered Kingston University graduate Evren Anil, who was killed after an argument over a chocolate bar.

Evren, 23, died in King's College Hospital on August 13 – eight days after he was senselessly attacked while driving with his sister Elif to Crystal Palace on August 5.

Evren was due to be awarded a first class honours degree in computer science and a prize for most improved student.

having controversially secured another £200,000 of council funds to secure its fit-out, had cause to celebrate with the arrival of its first major sponsor.

The £50,000 sponsorship from riverside restaurant Frère Jacques takes the theatre closer to its £600,000 sponsorship target. It will open in January.

Hail Mary: The pine tree shrine in Surbiton

Deadlinepix KT16733

SEPTEMBER

A group which claims the Virgin Mary has been appearing for 20 years in a pine tree in Surbiton has shrugged off an official judgement from the Vatican that its beliefs are "hysterical".

Patricia de Menezes, 67, claims she first saw the apparition, dubbed "Our Lady of Surbiton", in 1984.

She has since set up a movement called the Community of Divine Innocence from her home in Adams Close where she lives with some of its devotees. Vatican spokesman Archbishop Angelo Amato said: "The community's spirituality is flawed at its root."

Kingston Hospital confirmed its consultant Dr Matthew Oldfield is a key witness in the investigation into disappearance in Portugal of Madeleine McCann.

Dr Oldfield, a consultant endocrinologist, and his wife Rachael, a recruitment consultant, were among the 'tapas nine' of friends including the McCanns who dined together at the resort in Praia da Luz on May 3, the night Madeleine went missing.

Kingston was at the centre of a five-day run on the Northern Rock bank.

Customers queued around the block from the branch in Castle Street as they tried to withdraw funds following news the bank had asked for emergency help from the Bank of England.

OCTOBER

It was make-or-break time for former Kingston College student Leah Lauder, when she sang live to an audience of millions in ITV's The X Factor.

Leah, 20, was a member of girl-band Hope - which was one of just 12 acts to reach live the final.

Described by Simon Cowell as Britain's answer to the American group the Pussycat Dolls, the five girls were put together after being initially rejected by the judges as solo artists.

Sadly they failed to scoop the top prize.

Friends and family have rallied round mother-of-twins Jo Westlake after the sudden death of her beloved guide dog Barley.

The five-year-old labrador's death from a rare form of cancer came less than a fortnight after she won a national award in the Guide Dog of the Year Awards.

Anglers on the Thames had a chance of catching a whopping 40lb carp after it swam nearly 50 miles to Kingston Bridge.

The huge mirror carp - known to Anglers as the Barnet fish and thought to be several decades old - was caught at the end of September by the Environment Agency in its annual electro-fishing survey of the Thames.

No Hope: Leah, far right, and other member of the Simon Cowell's X Factor band

Uninsured: Denise Williams-Yelbert received six point on her licence after killing cyclist Ian Ward
Deadlinepix HY1387

The grieving family of a dead cyclist said they were considering suing the motorist who killed him but escaped with only six points on her licence.

Denise Williams-Yelbert, 32, was driving without insurance and had only a Ghanaian licence at the time of the incident.

However, she was cleared of careless driving after the prosecution failed to prove that a tyre mark in the hard shoulder belonged to Ian Ward, 37, from Chessington. Mr Ward was hit as he cycled along the A309 Kingston bypass at Hinchley Wood.

There was a strong reaction to the news that Mikey Brown was serving a suspended sentence for stealing cars and driving dangerously at the time he was fatally stabbed in the Works nightclub in Kingston.

At the time of his death, Mikey, 23, was serving a 12-month suspended sentence for aggravated vehicle taking, driving dangerously and driving while disqualified, after being convicted in September last year. More than 40 comments were posted on yourlocal-guardian.co.uk, reacting to the news of Mikey's criminal record.

Plans were rejected for a hotel and housing complex by Kingston's riverside that would have concentrated poorer people into a single tower block – well away from their more affluent neighbours.

The proposals were for 370 flats and a 150-bed hotel run by the Moran Hotel Group.

DECEMBER

A Worcester Park man was one of more than a 100 Sir Richard Branson lookalikes taking part in a charity carol service with a twist yesterday. Greg Harding was donning a wig, fake goatee and a pastel shirt along with his work colleagues in the crazy stunt to raise £75,000 for the Rainbow Trust children's charity. They serenaded travellers at Heathrow with Madonna's Like a Virgin and at the same time looked to break a Guinness World Record by setting the record for the most Branson lookalikes under one roof.

Teenage burglar Lloyd Edwards, 19, was jailed for life for the brutal murder of mother-of-two Laila Rezk. He was electronically

Virgin on the ridiculous: The lookalikes try for the record tagged at the time he murdered Mrs Rezk at her Kingston Vale home on November 29 last year. Edwards, of Longmoor Roehampton, punched the mum repeatedly in the face and head after she interrupted him trying to burgle her home.

He left her dying in a pool of blood on the hallway floor. Had he served his full sentence for the latest in a long list of crimes, he would not have been released until the day after he murdered Laila. He will serve a minimum of 18 years.

'Just what do you have to do to get fined for illegally cycling in Clarence Street?' asked the Kingston Guardian after our reporter counted nine transgressors in a single 30-minute period.

Signs proclaim that £500 fines can be issued but not a single person was fined when Kingston Police stopped 159 people breaking the law during the two-week clampdown.

A police spokesman would not say if it had any plans to fine people in future.

They said what...?

“ People would climb up on the plinth and hug the figure ”

Wendy Woods, from Surbiton, whose husband Donald Woods had the idea for the huggable bronze statue of former South African president Nelson Mandela, in Parliament Square

“ I thought if it had lasted 10 years, it was probably dead ”

Betty Johnson, of Kightwood Crescent, about an unexploded World War II shell which she used as a doorstep for 60 years

“ The hopelessness you feel in Guantanamo can hardly be described ”

Bisher al-Rawi, from New Malden, released in April after being held by the US for four years

“ What can you do? You can't stop nature can you? ”

Neil Morris, 32, after being forced out of his flooded home in Worcester Park with his wife and five-month-old daughter

Concern over Crossrail levy

Business leaders in Kingston are concerned that a two per cent levy to help pay for London's Crossrail project will put the town's Business Improvement District (Bid) at risk.

Kingston's businesses already pay one per cent towards the Bid, run as Kingstonfirst, but are being asked to contribute an extra two per cent through a supplementary business rate (SBR) for the line, which offers no direct benefit to the town.

It runs from Maidenhead and Heathrow in the west into Essex and Kent in the east.

Town centre manager Graham McNally said he did not want to stand in the way of the project but would meet London Mayor Ken Livingstone in the new year to see whether the BID levy could be offset against the two per cent SBR.

"Our position is that the £700,000 to £800,000 we receive from the one per cent Bid levy is fundamentally important to the wellbeing of Kingston," he said.

"It is not fair or appropriate for retailers to pay the same towards the cost of Crossrail as a retailer located in Canary Wharf."

Mr McNally said he was concerned that with business facing a possible three per cent levy, they would vote against

by ALITA HOWE

ahowe@london.newsquest.co.uk renewing Kingston's Bid next winter.

"It has delivered real hard increases in retail figures and three successive years of crime reduction because businesses, police and the local authority are working together on this great idea."

Lisa Gagliani, chief executive of Kingston Chamber of Commerce, said businesses in Kingston had benefited from the Bid, saw their contribution being well spent and said the good work started by the Bid needed to be sustained.

Two-thirds of businesses currently support the Bid, but Ms Gagliani said the chamber felt that if the Crossrail SBR was introduced, that proportion would decrease.

"The chamber, council and Kingston First are united in trying to negotiate that Kingston's businesses are either exempt from the Crossrail levy, or that the Mayor supports a major work in Kingston that will offset the payment," she said.

A spokesman for the Mayor said it was right for Kingston to pay for Crossrail because many residents would benefit from the boost to London's economy.

'Support the high street'

The Federation of Small Businesses (FSB) is urging shoppers to hit the high street rather than rely on out-of-town retail parks.

The FSB said bigger sites, and the free parking and below-cost sales often offered by such parks forced many independent retailers out of business.

Geoff Williamson, chairman of the Surrey and West Sussex Region of the FSB, said: "If we want our independent shops to be around next Christmas we have to support them."

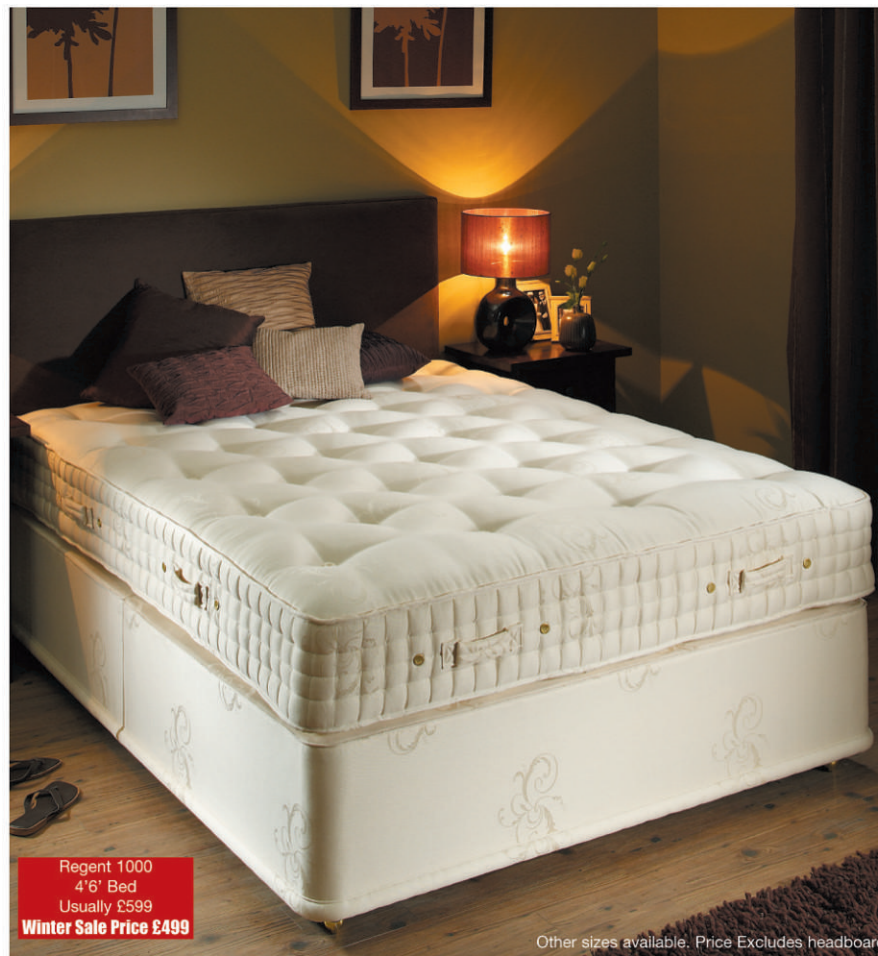

Estate agents go for gold

As well as the top prize, Bernard Marcus scooped gold for best large estate agency, best letting agent and best financial services at the Estate Agency of the Year Awards,

Having a go: Gavin Hull and partner Nicola McKenzie playing with the Nintendo Wii

Deadlinepx CR18288

A Wii break from studies

Sacrificing a law degree for a lifetime of computer games sounds like slacking.

But, Nicola McKenzie, 19, has put her dreams of becoming a lawyer on hold after just three months at Kingston University to set up the Console Lounge, in Surrey Street, Croydon, with her partner Gavin Hull.

The couple have invested in nine Xbox 360s, five Playstation 3s and one Nintendo Wii, costing more than £4,000, and 15 32-inch high definition televisions.

Nicola said: "I have always really enjoyed playing computer games, but Gavin is really into them and we realised that there is no permanent base for people to play them around here, or anywhere else in the country."

Murderer on licence jailed for attempted kidnap

A convicted murderer who tortured and killed a young girl in 1979 has been jailed for life for trying to kidnap a 19-year-old student while out on licence.

I agree the HEMS Air Ambulance should be fully funded by the NHS. The NHS should spend money on HEMS rather than complex pieces of art work for hospital walls, such as at Kingston.

Simon, Surbiton

Flights every 90 seconds?

An extra 110 planes a day will fly over Wandsworth if proposals to end runway alternation at Heathrow get the go-ahead.

He was jailed for life to serve a minimum 17 years. He was released in 2005 having served 25 years and went to live with his family in Hanworth. Judge Charles Tilling today sentenced Smith to life imprisonment, to serve a minimum six years. Obviously the Judge couldn't care less about the safety of young ladies! This man has proved he is a constant danger - these are only two crimes he has been tried for - what about the rest where women haven't come forward. He should be away for LIFE! How can life the second time around mean 6 years? This country stinks!

Sarah Surrey

This is the sort of guy that should have a lethal injection. It won't make any difference what punishment you give out. When he gets out he will do it again.

Traisie, Mictham

What is the deterrent for people like this? They must be laughing inside when the judge sentences them to life as it doesn't mean life at all.

Liv Surrey

Cyclists know they can evade law

Your report "Anarchy on Two Wheels" (December 13) clearly highlighted not only problems caused by illegal cycling in Clarence Street but it also demonstrated how little interest and concern the council and police have towards pedestrians.

Despite the clarity of the law (as seen in the Highway Code), despite the signs banning cycling, despite the campaigns mounted by individuals and despite the verbal warnings given to hundreds of antisocial cyclists, this unacceptable behaviour continues unabated - and not just in Clarence Street but also throughout the borough where the majority of cyclists ride on pavements rather than on the roads. Why is this? Because they know they can get away with it.

They believe, understandably, that the police will not issue on-the-spot fines and they know the council is only interested in targeting motorists and not cyclists, so why not continue to flout the law?

The revealing comment, "we remain open-minded" from the "council spokesman" tells me more about how empty their minds are and less about any intention to act.

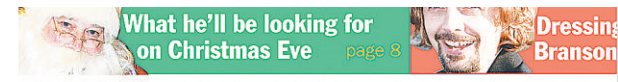

Also, the "corporate-speak" nonsense from Acting Chief Inspector Richard Dean - "I am looking at ways of working together with partners to explore avenues to educate cyclists etc, etc" - betrays his obvious off-duty interest in stand-up comedy.

I could suggest a number of "avenues" he should explore - starting with Clarence Street!

What both the council and police need to do is get off their proverbial backsides and start to listen to the concerns of the law-abiding taxpayers of Kingston.

ANARCHY ON TWO WHEELS

What do you have to do to be punished for illegally cycling in Clarence Street?

Anarchy: Our front page from December 13

Current wharf proposals are appalling

Eagle Wharf: Nearby residents are not happy with the proposed development

Deadlinepix KT17933

Regarding the proposed Eagle Wharf development in Kingston, I have to say I am absolutely appalled by the current proposals which appear to show little to no consideration to the local community.

We believe the majority of local interests would agree that the area needs to be upgraded, but like yourself do not understand the need for the area to provide much more than it does now as an area for quiet relaxation by the riverside.

Our residents will shortly hold their annual general meeting and the development proposals will most probably dominate our discussion.

If we look at the details there are a large number of important points to be made which cannot be made succinctly in a short note but one can immediately see certain key issues, for example:
□ Fundamentally the area is manifestly too small to support the conceptual design intent of a social focal point with organised events.
□ The raised platform "stage" must be without question be deleted.

It is totally inappropriate and unacceptable to hold musical and other organised events in such close proximity to residential properties.

Similarly the proposal to install fixing points for the erection of marquees should be dropped.

□ There must be a clear physical delineation between the beer garden of the Ram and the rest of the area so drinkers do not easily spill out into the public area.
It is noted that the proposals include an area of green space (grass and trees) between Queens Reach and the rest of the open area.

This is presumably seen as a means of providing some separation from our apartment block.

However, the complete converse will be the case.

In the summer the public will want to use the grass to sit down and to take shelter from the sun using the trees, so concentrating people directly alongside Queens Reach.

As a residents' group it will be preferable if we can work through the issues with the council.
But if we do not see our views being given proper consideration with changes agreed, we will have no option but to go down the litigation route.

IAN MADLE
Resident of Queens Reach

Some are living in shocking conditions

There are a large number of reasons why I think I am lucky to live in the Royal Borough of Kingston. Amongst them are the good shopping centre, the riverside bars and restaurants, the cinema, soon the theatre and good schools.

Even though I taught in Coombe Girls' School for 20 years and became aware that there were families who were not so well-off as most of the local population in this prosperous borough. It wasn't until I became a councillor did I become aware of the terrible conditions in which some of our residents have to live.

During the first two years I thought the cases I saw were rare, I thought just a home or two which had slipped through the net. The longer I am a councillor the more aware I am that this is not so.

So many houses are in terrible conditions. Black mould in the bathrooms, kitchens and around the windows. I was told it was "lifestyle". The fact that some of the houses were so damp that tiles and paper will not stick to the walls could not be put down to life style. It is not something that has happened overnight but the stock has been deteriorating for at least 20 year.

CHRIS HALL
Cavendish Road
New Malden

By mid-year, people will be falling for David Cameron's spiel, which will amount to borrowing the defuncted socialism of new Labour while sedulously working to the only end of the Conservative Party: making rich people much richer.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

Willing to take on the big boys at sale time

Bashir Mohammed, 57, owns four designer shops in Kingston, two in Fife Road and two in the Bentall Centre under the Pie brand. He has another two shops in Chiswick and lives in Ham. He spoke to ALITA HOWE

As an independent store, how do you prepare for a sale?

Unlike the multiples we don't buy in clothes to sell for the sales – we sell our existing stock.

The multiples are on a different agenda, they are cash-injected finance companies with money invested by venture capitalists and aren't interested in the clothes. Independents shouldn't try to compete with the multiples – we have a different set of rules.

We work on a personal basis with customers who come to us for the quality of the clothes and to create an individual look.

How does your sale work?

Our sale is a genuine sale where we genuinely reduce it over time. We don't just reduce everything to half-price straightaway – we start at 25 per cent and reduce further as time goes on.

It is carefully calculated throughout the year – if you have a two-month sale in January and February and then another in June and July, that's only eight months of selling at cost price, so it is crucial for us that we don't go into a sale too early – the multiples don't care if they make a loss.

A genuine sale: Bashir Mohammed

How do you decide what stock to put in the sale?

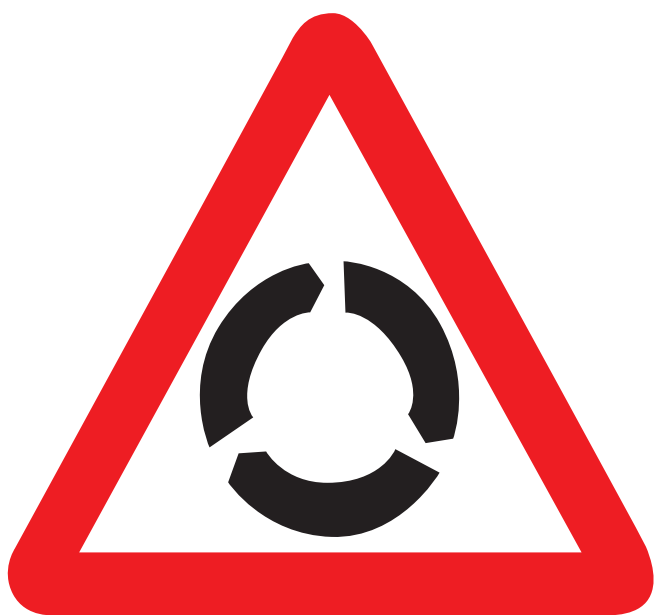

Basic clothes such as plain t-shirts we wouldn't put in the sale, but most other stock goes in because we buy in for a season and need to sell it.

Do you feel under pressure to start your sales earlier each year?

We don't feel under pressure – if you walk around Kingston, the ones with sales are retailers who can't afford not to have the takings in December. The big boys are cutting everyone's throat by having sales too early and have educated people in Kingston to hang on and wait for the half price sales.

Get your skates on!

Worried you are not good enough to attempt skating at one of London's outdoor rinks or, perhaps worse, are too good to be fenced in by a bunch of amateurs? Our two reporters, Nancy Groves and Paul Fleckney – of vastly differing skating abilities – went to Kew Gardens rink and found that, regardless of talent, Christmas spirit binds us together like sticky tinsel. Merry Christmas everybody!

Paul: Some people are born with genius, some acquire it. I am a bit of both. And one of my extraordinary talents is ice skating. As a young boy, while other lads would wear their football kit to the supermarket, I would don my ice-skating boots and leotard to trawl the malls with my heavily disguised parents.

Greatness seemed inevitable and when, aged just seven, I received a lesson from Olympic gold medal-winning skater Robin Cousins, it was because he saw in me a lot of himself, not because my beginners' teacher was off sick that day.

At the end of that lesson, presumably overcome, Robin skated off without even acknowledging me. His silence said everything. He knew, and I knew, I was special.

Which is why Kew Garden's rink presents such a dilemma. Can I enjoy and express myself without losers who can't skate getting in my way? Well, readers, pleasure came from unexpected sources.

The beauty of the surroundings – the Temperate House lit up splendidly, the eerie beauty of the walk to the rink, the possibility of sneaking a glimpse of one of Henry Moore's brooding sculptures.

As for the skating, I have never felt such satisfaction as guiding the hopeless Nancy through the basics.

Like a modern-day Mother Teresa, I nursed her through those difficult times and, in a world where computers and machinery have rendered the male impotent, I felt like a man again.

Nancy: Co-ordination has never been my strongpoint and I am none too keen on showing this to the rest of the world. Imagine my delight, then, when I found most people at Kew were on my level, waddling around in those ridiculous plastic boots like a duck in wellies.

It also helps that the ice rink is tucked away deep inside Kew Gardens. Not good for getting to the loo but at least you don't feel so on show as you would at places like the Natural History Museum.

As a pre-rink warm-up, and for reasons of Dutch courage, I got straight onto the mulled wine, it being luscious and temperatures being on the chilly side.

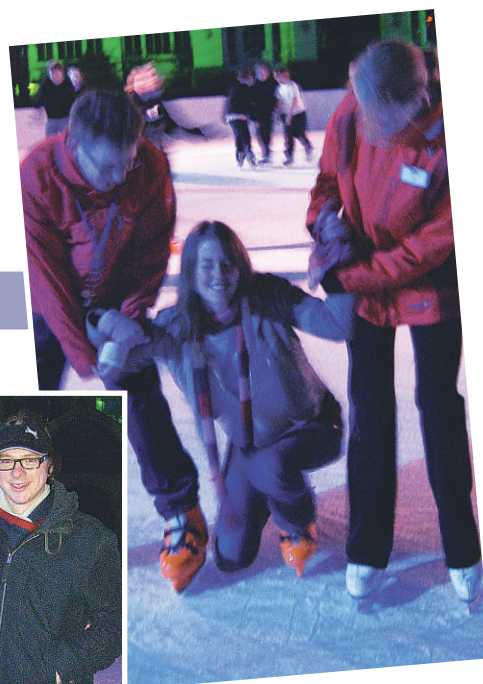

Dressed for the part in my best pom-pom hat and bag, I started tentatively, reluctant to peel myself away from the side. Paul was rubbish in comparison to his outrageous claims but it proved handy to have someone who could give a few tips, and stop me falling over and enduring a wet bottom for the next few hours. Even if I nearly toppled him in the process.

What you do have to endure, though, are the turkey twizzlers, those show-offs who think they look oh-so-cool spinning around, nailing the circuits at break neck speed before stopping abruptly in a shower of ice and ego.

There weren't too many at Kew but they are out there, the wintery equivalent of the beach bum, whose most sophisticated seduction technique involves kicking sand in your face and being reasonable at volleyball. Not that I'm suggesting Paul was one of them, of course.

Kew Gardens Ice Rink, Victoria Gate, Royal Botanical Gardens, Kew Road, until January 6, 10am-10pm, £7.50-£11.50, family £30, call 0870 400 0797, visit kewgardensice.rink.com

Ouch! After falling over, Nancy Groves gets a helping hand from the friendly stewards at Kew ice rink. Paul Fleckney is all smiles, he had no such trouble.

A scenic diversion

It's practical, it's family friendly and it's fun. Andy Enright reports on Renault's latest offering

The Renault Scenic dCi150 has a fully stamped up set of family credentials but shows that being in charge of a family doesn't mean that driving should be a fun-free experience.

The 0-60 time of a gnat's over 9 seconds doesn't do justice to the way this common-rail diesel gets its thing on in the midrange, punting the Scenic up the road with some purpose. You'll have 251lb/ft of torque to play with, which is as much as a Porsche Cayman S. That will certainly help when you've got your Scenic loaded to the nines with family and gear and you're looking at a big hill, saving you the hassle of downchanging and ragging the engine through gritted teeth. Just press and go with this barrel-chested powerplant.

If changing gear altogether represents an unacceptable waste of left arm resource, Renault has been good enough to supply a slick-shifting six-speed auto that is smart enough to capitalise on this engine's torque. The dCi150 engine is only offered in the top two trims, Dynamique at £19,415 and Privilege at £20,415. The six-speed auto adds another £1,000 to those prices although fuel consumption and emissions take a hit. In the manual, you can expect to see 35.3mpg and emit 154g/km of carbon dioxide. Opt for the auto and, fitted with its particulate filter to achieve Euro IV compliance, you'll eke 32.8 miles from a gallon of fuel and emit 186g/km.

The long wheelbase Grand Scenic is available for a premium of around £1,500 in five or seven-seat guise, but most will settle for the regular Scenic we're looking at here, offering as it does a usefully larger cabin than its predecessor.

a used car,
check the wheels.
All six of them.

The ones at all four corners, obviously.
Check the tyre treads and rims for wear.

a worn steering wheel can betray the Big boost for youth games

The London Youth Games, in which all 32 London boroughs – including Kingston – and the City of London take part, has a new sponsor.

UK construction giants Balfour Beatty has signed a six-year deal worth £1.7million up to 2013.

The London Youth Games were launched by the former Greater London Council in 1977 to mark the silver jubilee of the Queen's accession.

It is now the largest youth sports event in Europe and this year more than 25,000 young Londoners aged between seven and 17 competed for their boroughs in more than 30 sports.

Competitors in past years have included England footballers Ashley Cole and Ledley King, Olympic cycling gold medalist Bradley Wiggins and former javelin world record-holder Steve Backley.

Christine Ohuruogu, who won the World Championships women's 400m title in Osaka in August, is another former LYG competitor.

"Having taken part myself in the London Youth Games, I know how exciting and positive they," she said.

"This type of investment towards the London Youth Games is great news for the sport and the city.

"With such strong backing the games are sure to develop even further, nurturing some of the most promising talent the city has on offer."

London Youth Games chairman Anthony Kendall said: "This announcement represents a seminal moment in the history of the London Youth Games, which has at its heart the ethos of involving as many young Londoners as possible in competitive sport."

Goddard is a hot prospect

by SAMI MOKBEL

smokbel@london.newsquest.co.uk

Boss Alan Dowson believes new signing Stephen Goddard could help fire Kingstonian to promotion.

Goddard – on an initial month's loan from AFC Wimbledon with a view to a permanent deal – is looking to resurrect his career with Ks after a mixed spell with the club's landlords.

Goddard's switch to Ks surprised some after he was banned for a month for refusing to leave the field following a red card in a reserve game for the Dons.

Dowson insists he is more concerned by his lack of fitness than his bad-boy image, and has vowed to get the 21-year-old back into shape.

"The boy has got so much talent but his fitness is lacking. We will be working with him to put that right."

He limped off shortly after scoring Ks' winner in the win over Corinthian Casuals 12 days ago.

Dowson told the Guardian: "He scored a good goal, but had to come off with a thigh injury, which is a bit of a worry for us. "It is important for us to get him fit because Stephen is a great talent."

Meanwhile, Dowson insists the one automatic promotion spot is still up for grabs – even though Dover Athletic have stolen a march on their rivals in recent weeks.

"People are saying that Dover have it won already, but I don't agree with that," he said.

"There is still a long way to go and many points to be won. "I understand why people think that because they are in a very strong position, but that can change in just two or three games. I am certainly not giving up."

Great talent: Ks have high hopes for Stephen Goddard Deadlinepix SP17503

Ks host promotion rivals Tooting & Mitcham in Ryman League Division One South on Saturday.

Tooting are managed by former Ks boss Billy Smith, who is relishing the prospect.

"Every game is important, we normally have a decent game against Kingstonian," said Smith.

"The Kingsmeadow pitch will suit us – normally on good passing surfaces we perform well."

"Alan Dowson usually produces decent sides, so it should be a good game."
